Hampton Keen and the firm recently resolved litigation against a product manufacturer involving the catastrophic failure of the driver and front passenger's respective seatbacks during a highway accident.

Although the back seat passengers fortunately escaped with minor injuries, the front seat passenger was killed when his seatback collapsed and the driver sustained a cognitive brain injury due to his seat's failure. Having handled multiple seatback failure cases throughout the country, the firm and its team of experts determined that the seatbacks were defective when involved in a moderate speed, rear impact and filed a lawsuit against the manufacturer. After several years of litigation, Keen successfully resolved the litigation, thereby helping to ensure that the emotional and economic needs of his clients were met.

The Clark Fountain law firm was recently appointed interim class counsel and members of Plaintiffs' Executive Committee along with several other law firms in the pending class action lawsuit that alleges a defective Continental Airbag Control Module in 2008-2010 Honda Accords may result in a non-deployment of the airbag in the event of a collision requiring the deployment of an airbag. Following firm attorneys Don Fountain and Poorad Razavi's filing of the class action lawsuit, Honda subsequently issued a recall for the very same issues alleged in the Complaint. The alleged defect has also resulted in warnings or recalls issued on the following vehicles, which are also being included in the class action lawsuit: 2008-2009 Chrysler Town and Country, 2008-2009 Dodge Grand Caravan, 2009 Dodge Journey, 2008-2009 Mercedes Benz C Class, 2008-2009 Audi A4, A5, and Q5, 2010 Mercedes Benz GLK Class, and 2009 Volkswagen Routan.
